EDITOR: Cremo – Goodby my beloved Benzito

Let's talk about luv! What is it? Is it always have to be love between two or more people? I say no! Love can be everything. Everything that makes you happy the moment you see or feel it. Love between two people is beautiful regardless of sex or color of the skin. But I want to talk about a different type of love tonight. A feeling that makes my jaw drop every time.

I'm talking 'bout cars! All car lovers will surely understand me. I will not start to list all extras in my ride that makes it so outstanding, because that's not the way I want to make you clear what this type of love means to me/us. Instead, I will share with you some thoughts why I chose that particular car.

Back then when I was looking for a decent car, the exterior wasn't the most important thing to me. Of course, I wanted it to look nice, but the thing that was far more important was the interior. A lot of you will probably shake their heads right now, but let me explain it in a brief moment.

What I imagine is when I open the door and take place in the driver's seat I want to look at a beautiful interior that will make my smile shine so bright that just looking at it, is as emotional as driving at fast velocity. After finding a car with this particular interior, it was almost a matter of time that I start to customize the exterior.

Since I already had the perfect interior, I needed to give my ride a really personal look. So after 2 years of happy driving I started to buy and instantly modify a lot of parts. And those hundreds of hours you put into it can be so much fun. Actually the more effort your put into it, the more you're going to be proud of yourself and the final result.

But the thruth is, when you start customizing your car, its a game with no end because you will always find something new to change. But even when I knew that I will have to sell my beauty, I put all that money and work into it, just so I can drive it for a month or two fully modified just the way I wanted it to be. And that's what a lot of people don't understand. But just look at it from another side.

What do you do when you're in love? Doesn't it say that love makes you blind or crazy? Everybody did something stupid just because of THAT feeling, so next time you judge a car lover, look at you and think of all that crazy stuff you did at a happy time in your life.

Now that my beauty is gone, but in good hands I believe, I hope to find a worthy successor, only time will tell...
